

Further
Information

		Eats seafloor invertebrates, mainly crustaceans. Generally slow moving but capable of short bursts of speed.	Thornfish <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- rounded tail</li> <li>- sub-terminal mouth</li> </ul>
		Able to chase and capture fish and squid for food. A fast swimmer and is constantly on the move.	Kingfish <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- Crescent-shaped tail</li> <li>- Terminal mouth</li> </ul>
		Feeds on small weed-dwelling or planktonic crustaceans. Slow moving, does not use tail for propulsion.	Sea Horse <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- Prehensile-like tail used for anchorage.</li> <li>- Specialised mouth, 'slurps' zooplankton.</li> </ul>
		Often feeds near the surface on other fish. Generally slow moving but capable of short accurate bursts of speed.	Grouper <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- Rounded tail</li> <li>- Up-pointing mouth</li> </ul>
		Feeds on invertebrates on the sandy seafloor. A reasonably fast swimmer, but does not swim fast all the time.	Red Moki <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- Forked tail</li> <li>- Sub-terminal mouth</li> </ul>
		A fish that feeds on mid-water invertebrates and small fishes from below. Its deeply forked tail makes it a fast swimmer.	Horse Mackerel <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- Forked tail</li> <li>- Up-pointing mouth</li> </ul>